THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, APRIL 14, 1898.

War is Inevitable.

The country now waits upon the final action of Congress to know the precise language in which will be couched the resolutions empowering the President to immeditely forcibly intervene to stor Spanish rule in Cuba, and as to when the hostilities that are expected in consequence are likely to begin. The action of the house in adopting the resolutions reported by the majority of the foreign affairs committee calling for in tervention by the land and naval forces of the United States, and the establishment of the independence of the Cuban people, was on the line recommended by the President( though going somewhat A point of order forced a delay of any action by the senate until to-day, and until it is known what the attitude of that body will be it is impossible to say whether there bill be a serious disagreement between the two houses or not.

To-day will doubtless decide the matter finally. Armed intervention and independence will undoubtedly be the repoint whether independence of the presnized or that the conclusion will be in the form decided upon by the house. The advice of General Lee advocating the house provision in this respect may have a potent influence upon the senate.

That we shall have war in any event is beyond a reasonable doubt, and that it will come almost immediately on the final action by Congress is conceded on all sides. This is the situation, and the activity in the war and navy departments in preparing for immediate action to drive Spain from Cuba shows that in official circles actual war is regarded as inevitable.

Misrepresenting the President

The Parkersburg Sentinel is a Demo cratic paper that is so blindly partisan that it will not even view an historic message of a Republican President fairly enough to make an intelligent com ment upon it. This leads it to grossly misrepresent it of course, as well as to misquote it. It takes as a text some and builds an editorial which is not wardeclares that the President "is opposed upon the question of Spanish sovereignty in Cuba." There is not one line in the message which expresses any such sentiment. The tenor and the express terms of the President's conclusions are precisely the opposite of what the Sentinel says they are. In asking Congress for the power to act, the President's exuct language is:

In view of these facts and of these considerations, I ask the Congress to authorize and empower the President to take measures to secure a full and final termiize and empower the Fresident to take measures to secure a full and final termination of hostilities between the government of Spain and the people of Cuba, and to secure in the Island the establishment of Spain and the set of the state of

It was the President's expressed desire to interfere by armed force if necessary and to secure the establishment of a stable government for the Cubans. The matter of continued Spanish sovereign ty in this connection is not considered. The entire portion of the message reviewing the history of the insurrection is to show that Spanish sovereignty has not only been a failure but a positive curse to civilization. If the Sentinel will give the message a careful reading it will disabuse its mind of a wrong im pression.

An Important Lesson.

The Washington Post has a timely article on one of the lessons we, as a Nation, have learned since the present strained relations between Spain and the United States began. The lesson referred to by the Post is one which wise men in the past have sought to impress upon our government without avail. The crisis has brought out in a clear light the folly in not heeding the warnings that we were pursuing a course which would find us in a state of unpreparedness in the event of a war crisis with a foreign power.

Unpleasant as the admission is, it is nevertheless true that eight weeks ago this country was illy prepared for either an offensive or defensive action that was liable to be precipitated upon us at any time, and which we are now facing Within this period we have made huge arrides in the work of repairing the recults of the neglect of many years, and by the expenditure of an enormous emergency fund have gotten ourselves in a reasonably fair fighting condition Had the climax of the crisis been sud-denly precipitated in a way that would have made it absolutely necessary to go to war within a few days we would have found ourselves in a lamentably weak

Thanks to the promptness of Cons and the vigorous and tireless work of the authorities we are infinitely better off than we were at the time of the Maine explosion, and perhaps if those who have complained of delay were to carefully consider the comparative conditions between then and now, they might see in the delay a fortunate circum

The Hartford Courant, calling atter tion to this feature of the lesson of the hour, which teaches us that for a coun try to ignore the necessity of being prepared for war in a time of peace is a short sighted policy, says:

short sighted policy, says:

We cannot afford to have a convulsion every time that peace is threatened. Modern warfare is swift and deadly. Ships that require three years for construction, harbors that need the work of years to be safely fortified, cannot be made ready at a few weeks' notice. The business must be done before the necessity arises. Often the fact that it has been done renders the chances of war far less. It is inspiring and creditable to see how this country has set to work to make the best of its great natural resources under the present threat, but the best informed know that threat, but the best informed know that the state of the present threat, but the best informed know that the state of th the Post, and they are. We also agree have these truths burned into the intelligence of our law-makers and their constituents. Although this is a peace ful country, when peace can be honorably maintained, and, in pursuance of p wise policy, only goes to war when peaceful means of settling a difficulty fall, as under the present circumstances the past neglect of means of defens when necessary to maintain the national honor, has been a policy the unwisdom of which is forcing itself upon us. The surest means to guarantee peace is to always be prepared for the national de-

Lee on the Maine Disaster

The statement made by General Fitzhugh Lee before the senate committee on foreign relations, to the effect that there was no doubt in his mind that the destruction of the Maine was due to Spanish agencies, will confirm in the minds of the great majority of the people of this country that belief, which they have all along held. Though no direct exidence to fix the blame on any person was developed in the investigation, it was regarded everywhere that the circumstantial evidence was strong and convincing that the tragedy was th result of a conspirary not unknown to It has been repeatedly shown that such an explosion could not have been a mere accident. General Lee is convinced of this in his own mind, and is probably in possession of enough information to justify him in his belief. A fact which tends further to fixing this belief in the direct responsibility of the Spanish authorities at Havana is that they have made no apparent effort to trace down the perpetrators of the out rage; nor has the Spanish government made such an effort.

Whether the United States is ever able to prove absolutely a direct Spanish agency or not, every intelligent person. studies the circumstances of the explosion and the evidence that is already of record, will always believe that the ship was blown up by persons having access to the means, and that such persons must have been very close to the Spanish authorities in Havana. That impression will grow stronger the more the matter is studied and debated. There is not one particle of evidence that tende to disprove the theory.

Possibility for Lee.

It is not a remote possibility that General Lec's expressed desire that the next time he visits Cuba it may be as a parof the military force that goes to asser! the power and carry out the will of the United States government may be realized. No man is better equipped than he for command of the American forces in Cuba should war occur, could he b given such a commission without injustice to any officer already in the service His perfect familiarity with the entire situation on the siland, his undoubted courage and military knowledge pecu-Harly fit him for such a command. Per haps his reputed ambition may be realized and in such an event no action on the part of the President would inspire greater popular confidence in the outcome. It would be unpopular only with the Spaniards, and their opinion concerning the matter would not count for

A marked contrast between the characters of the people of the two countries is found in the fact that there are 5,000 Spanlards in New York city, and, as a New York contemporary remarks, every man of them is as secure from insult or injury as if he were promenading the streets of Madrid, while American who were residing in Havana were obliged to come home to avoid the consequences of the violent anti-American feeling there. It is true, as our con-temporary says, that this country protects strangers within her gates and never makes war on non-combatants.

Events for April shows progress. It is filled with good things of a high and refined order and does credit to Wheeling. The illustrations are as handsome as the fair subjects of them, and that is saying a great deal. The literary features are fully up to the standard.

It is estimated that since the beginning of the crisis between the United States and Spain more than 1,000,000 citizens of this country have volunteered for military services in the event of war and yet there are millions more willing ones should they be needed.

Castelar, the Spanish leader, writing of the Cuban situation says: "Indignation seals my mouth." Perhaps that is why he has taken to writing his foolish sentiments about the United States instead of speaking them.

Blanco was too busy to bid General Fitzhugh Lee goodby, but thousands upon thousands of busy American citizens have found time to suspend work long enough to bid him welcome home.

While all the leading men of the country are devoting their attention to the momentous events that are taking place, involving a grave question affectmaking a political tour rehearsing his ong ago exploded financial theories, and finds time only to say that after he has studied the President's message he will give the public the benefit of his Senators who were so anxious about the alleged delay of the President are willing to resort to obstructive tactics because they cannot have their own way.
